Bharat Scouts and Guides Foundation Day, observed on 7 November, marks the unification of the Scout Association of India and the Girls Guides Association into a single national organisation in 1948-49. This merger established a unified movement recognised by WOSM and WAGGS, dedicated to developing character, leadership, and service among India's youth.

The day—also known as BSG Flag Day—symbolises the organisation's commitment to national service, community engagement, and environmental responsibility. It serves as a reminder of the movement's origins, its mission of building responsible citizens, and its continuous contribution to India's social and cultural fabric.
