The World Environmental health day was celebrated by the Botanical Society focusing on the theme Global Public Health on September 26, 2023, at Government Degree College, Sanjauli. It was an exceptional event that focused on the significance of public health in our global community. This report aims to provide an overview of the event, its key highlights, and the activities that took place.

Event Overview

The event primarily focused on an inter-class competition featuring presentations and posters created and presented by students pursuing BSc in life sciences. This competition was the cornerstone of the celebration, allowing students to showcase their research, creativity, and understanding of critical public health issues.

Key Highlights

Inter-Class Competition

The heart of the event was the inter-class Power point presentation and Poster making competitions, where students passionately presented their findings and insights on various aspects of global public health.

These presentations and posters covered a wide range of topics, including Plastic Pollution, Global Warming, Soil Pollution, Biodiversity Loss and Air Pollution.

Skit on Plastic Pollution

To raise awareness about the environmental impact on public health, a thought-provoking skit on plastic pollution was performed. It highlighted the devastating consequences of plastic pollution on our ecosystems and health.

Cultural Performances

The celebration was not just about academics; it also featured lively cultural performances, including traditional dances and inspiring musical performances by talented students.

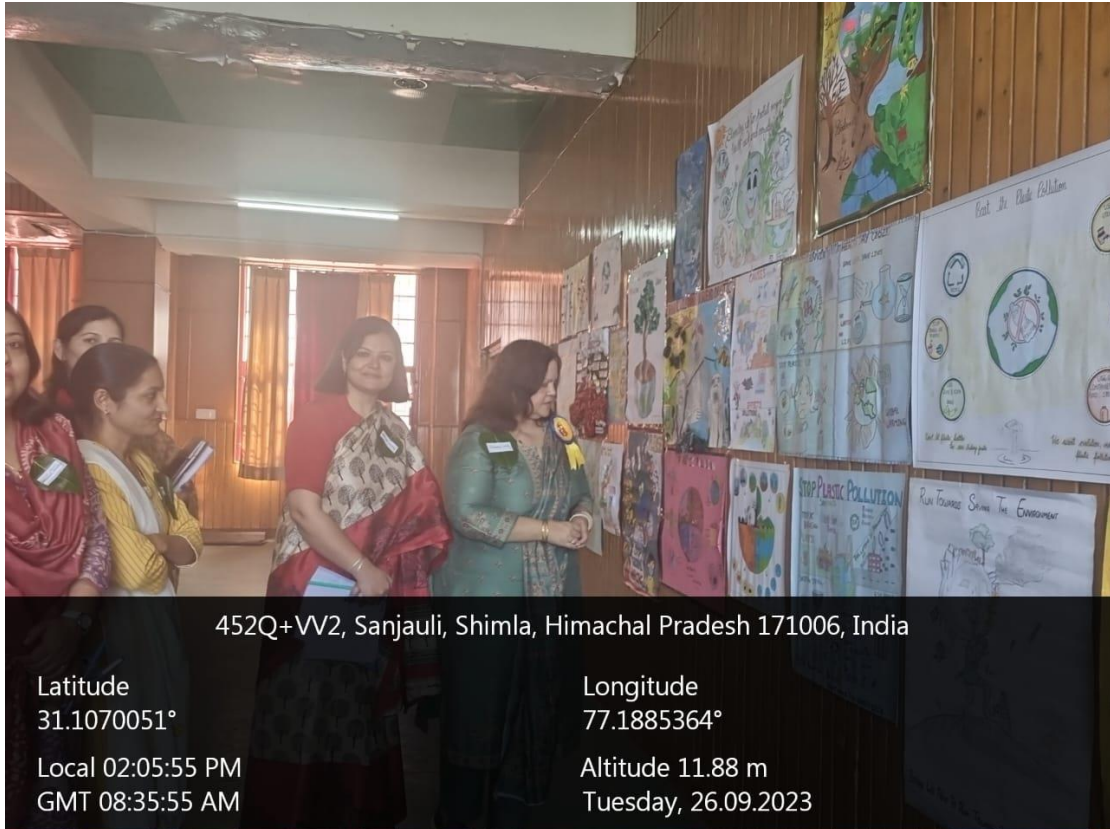

These activities added a vibrant and engaging dimension to the event.

Poster Exhibition

In addition to the presentations, an exhibition of visually striking posters was held. These posters effectively communicated key public health messages, making complex issues more accessible to one and all.

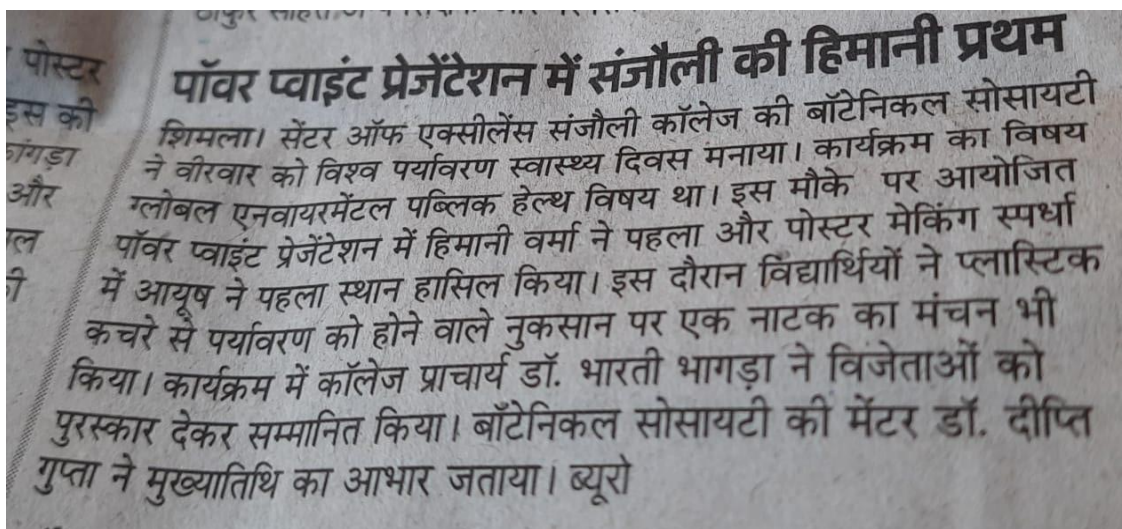

The World Global Public Health Day celebration at Government Degree College, Sanjauli, on September 26, 2023, was a harmonious blend of academic excellence and co-curricular activities. It provided a platform for students to actively engage with public health issues and fostered a sense of responsibility towards global health challenges.

The power point presentations and the posters were judged by Dr Shiwani Khatri, Mrs Mona Sharma and Mrs Shalu Dulta. The principal of the college Prof Bharti Bhagra felicitated the prize winners, Himani Verma secured first position in power point presentation competition and in poster making competition Ayushi stood first .

This event demonstrated the college's commitment to promoting public health awareness and encouraging students to become future leaders in the field of public health.. The Mentor of the Botanical society Dr Deepti Gupta thanked all the students particularly the President Sheetal Sharma and Vice president Chetan Kumar of the Botanical Society for making the event a grand success.
