Career Options for Students of Languages

Dr. Kamayani Bisht interacted with students of the PG programs in Hindi and English (M.A) and students who have English as their optional subject of study in the undergraduate programme. In the two hour long session, she addressed concerns about career options being limited after graduating with languages as major fields of study. She spoke at length about careers in Media, as content writers/editors, in publishing houses, for social media websites and portals, as translators in the publishing industry, in the media, in PR agencies, embassies, travel industry, in the marketing Industry, as HR managers, as Corporate Trainers, as researchers/analysts. The obvious traditional career prospects like teaching and journalism (after going through the required process) are still popular with language graduates. She stressed on linguistic dexterity and the need to acquaint oneself with at least one foreign language if one hopes to pursue a career in a foreign country. The session was attended by 93 students and the enthusiastic participation in the Q n R session was an index of the relevance of the topic.
