

Nature Walk with Students of English Literature on the Topic of Romantic Poetry

The Department of English organized a nature walk for students of English literature on 12 September 2018, centered on the theme of Romantic Poetry. The purpose of this activity was to provide an immersive experience that would deepen the students' understanding of nature's significance in Romantic literature. The walk aimed to create a harmonious connection between the poetic verses studied in the classroom and the breathtaking beauty of the natural world.

The nature walk took place on at a picturesque location of IIAS known for its scenic landscapes and serene ambiance offered an ideal setting to explore the Romantic spirit in nature. Accompanied by faculty members the students eagerly embarked on this unique educational journey.

Before commencing the walk, the students were provided with selected excerpts from notable Romantic poets like William Wordsworth, Samuel Taylor Coleridge, John Keats, and Percy Bysshe Shelley. These excerpts emphasized the poets' fascination with nature and its profound influence on their creative expressions. This open exchange of ideas encouraged critical analysis and nurtured a sense of camaraderie among the participants.

The event fostered a deeper connection between the academic curriculum and real-life experiences, leaving the students inspired and more attuned to the spirit of Romantic literature.
